

We all want to do our part to protect Mother Earth, and that includes the ways in which we buy, sell, and manufacture luxury products like fine jewelry and timepieces. The following articles have been written and compiled by San Diego Jewelry Buyers'™ expert staff to enhance your knowledge of sustainable luxury and encourage you to support the greening of the fine jewelry industry:

Recycling Gold & Going Green in San Diego

By recycling gold, diamonds, fine jewelry, and other precious assets, SDJB is doing its own small part toward reducing the need for increased diamond and precious metal mining. We also are strong supporters of the Ethical Metalsmiths, NoDirtyGold campaign, and Fair Trade Gems practices. To help jewelry shoppers in their desire to "go green", we've compiled some eco-friendly jewelry shopping tips in the above article.

Carl Blackburn: San Diego's Gold Buyer

In this media interview Carl Blackburn, San Diego's most prominent gold buyer, discusses the ways in which his company San Diego Jewelry Buyers impacts the local economy and the environment. For example, Blackburn says that when people sell scrap gold and gold jewelry to a San Diego gold refinery and buyer like SDJB, people are helping the environment by reducing the need for eco-harmful gold mining activities.

San Diego Guide: Pawn & Sell Jewelry

When you sell gold jewelry remember that the best prices are based on more than simple gold or gemstone weight. If you are going to sell jewelry in San Diego ask questions of the business you are considering doing business with. Make sure they demonstrate a clear understanding of jewelry materials, jewelry brands, and jewelry craftsmanship. Read more how you can make an informed decision when selling or pawning precious assets in this guide.
